A: You are talking about "white balance" rather than "white balance" "fix" This is in the Color temperature/Color balance section of the guide. Create a custom White Balance preset and use it You can create a custom white balance preset in Lightroom or Photoshop and then use it in the color temperature/color balance section of the white balance panel. Earlier today in a bizarre "mistake" by the big man at Reddit, it was revealed that the site had deleted a bunch of famous communities (from the old days). Reddit user SlickDIgdon was present at the creation of a lot of these communities, and they're all gone now. We have images of what was taken down and a few words of explanation. We talked to Slick at the time of the "mistake" and had a chance to see what communities were taken down, and for those that we were unable to get access to. It's still amazing to see these communities go, but I think it's pretty obvious that the original admins don't really care about the communities that much. It would appear that "potter fan fiction" was the most popular and long-lived of the communities, with a creator who named it PotterFanFiction. The community was a huge success with over 500,000 members and thousands of stories. There were three moderators, a main author named "NinjaMouse" who often posted about the community and when the communities site was going to go down. The community has since been restored, but it was never around long. The community died when the forums that hosted them went offline and the owner of the forums disappeared. For those who weren't even able to access the community, it's a shame. There were a couple of other communities that were deleted, but I don't think we'll ever be able to see them. The other communities that were deleted were "AdventureCraft", "Sing", and "Gaming". AdventureCraft is a game where you could make characters to do all kinds of cool stuff, Sing is a game where you play songs to improve your singing abilities, and Gaming was a forum where people could just talk about video games. You could play games on 82157476af
